The Second monthly pack meeting of Pack #115 met Wednesday night, December 28, at the Milo Town Hall.

The theme for this month was "Do Your Best." Crafts were centered around Christmas gifts for the family. The pack service project this month was collecting magazines to be presented to the Milo Community Hospital for patient use.

Each individual den also performed services such as shoveling snow.

Due to the large number of boys who earned awards, the meeting was centered around presentation of awards. Receiving awards for Bobcat were: Wayne Russell, Todd Pineau, Troy Pelletier, Paul McCleary, Sam Monahan, John Sullivan, Peter Chase, Michael Russell, John Robinson, Charlie Bell, and Stephen Robinson. Wolf badges were earned by Mark Treadwell and Harris Smart. A silver arrow was presented to Dale Piche. Awards earned, but not presented due to absence, were Alan Marks, Wolf, and Jason Weston, Bobcat.

The awards ceremony included lighted candles and the traditional campfire. Boys were presented badges by Cubmaster Robert Richards and pinned by their parents.

Den #8 presented a skit entitled "We Didn't Do Our Best, So Santa Didn't Come" -- well performed.

We were quite pleased with parent support this month and hope to see an even larger parent attendance in the following months.

Next month's theme is "going places." The dens will be taking a short trip to a mode of travel. Pack night in January will feature the "Pinewood Derby." Dens were given the derby kits at this month's pack meeting and will be competing on pack night. Parents, the boys will need your help on this one! Don't miss the Derby!

Coming up in February is the annual Blue and Gold Banquet.

A committee meeting will be held this week to discuss fund raisers for the pack.

We are still in need of den leaders and assistants.

THE SALVATION ARMY OFFERS APOLOGY

Charles E. Lowman, Coordinator of The Salvation Army Christmas Appeal for the State of Maine has offered an apology to local residents who have received multiple cards in The Salvation Army traditional Christmas Appeal.

Mr. Lowman and local volunteers are working diligently to consolidate several mailing lists into a composite list which will eliminate a duplication of mailings. Mr. Lowman indicated that substantial advances have been realized in developing the single non-duplicated list and it is anticipated that the problem will be resolved this season.

Mr. Lowman would like to express on behalf of The Salvation Army sincere appreciation to local contributors who have responded to the appeal -- "It is this continuing support of our many friends who enable The Salvation Army to provide food, clothing, toys, fuel and other basic needs to the less fortunate of our neighbors," said Mr. Lowman. "We also ask for the gift of your understanding and patience as we refine and consolidate our mail program."

Individuals who receive duplicate cards are asked to mail all cards to:

THE SALVATION ARMY
Charles E. Lowman
P.O. Box 3647
Portland, Maine 04104

in order that the duplicated name may be removed from the mailing list.

MILO PUBLIC LIBRARY NEWSLETTER

Each week, in addition to our regular description of our latest books, we will mention some of the functions of our Milo Public Library.

The book and other resources of the library constitute the "open door" by which each individual can escape from his limitations. Selection of needed materials is a basic function of the public library.

Some of our requested "needed materials" are of the medical reference nature. Several of these textbooks, dictionary or encyclopedia type medical books, have been purchased during 1977, and we were fortunate to have had additional books recently donated to us which added to this collection. Persons taking first aid courses, ambulance courses, and those who need to look up a subject pertaining to a medical problem are cordially invited to study at our own Milo Public Library during our library hours. And remember, we do have a phone -- 943-2612 -- and we will be happy to look up a subject for you if you are unable to come in.

Provision of materials means more than occasional availability. It means a supply sufficient to make the library a dependable source for most people most of the time. We feel that we have an excellent supply of materials for medical reference, and also books, of that nature, available for circulation.

BOOKS:

Irwin Shaw's sequel to Rich Man, Poor Man is Beggarman Thief.

It is 1968, the end of the saga of Tom Jordache, the murdered hero of Rich Man, Poor Man, the father to be avenged, lives to be continues -- a new generation takes center stage, in time of violence and peril; new bonds are formed between cousin and cousin, sister and brother, strangers and lovers; there is ecstasy and terror, victory and defeat -- the Jordaches survive.

The Stone Bull by Phyllis A. Whitney.

"I came upon it unexpectedly, and it had nothing to do with nature. Human hands had cleared this space, yet it seemed to belong to the forest like some hidden, magic circle of green. All about it dark hemlock crowded in, hiding and protecting its secret. In the very center of the ring, his head lowered for the charge, hooves spurning the ground, stood a great stone bull."

Jenny Vaughan senses secrets so terrible and demanding, she could not ignore them if she meant to be free, to belong to herself, to live -----.

A new non-fiction book of Poetry: Salt Spray and Pine, The Voices of Maine by The Poetry Fellowship of Maine.

This little book is dedicated to Maine -- whose beauty provides all the inspiration a poet could need.

Disobedient Teacher

Lois wanted a free hand in teaching her eighth grade students. So when the principal of the school came to visit her classroom, she refused to let him in. She also denied entry to other school officials seeking to observe her work.

Result: Lois was fired. Undaunted, she took the matter to court. Pointing out that she had tenure, she argued that her conduct was not serious enough to justify dismissal.

But the court decided she was guilty of insubordination and must go.

In most communities, insubordination by a teacher is considered grounds for discharge. One judge gave this reason:

"Lessons are learned from example as well as from precept. The example of a teacher who is continually insubordinate may teach children lessons they should not learn."

"Such conduct may unfit a teacher for service even though her other qualities may be sufficient. 'Book learning' is only a phase of the lessons a child should learn."

In another school, teachers were allowed to use a paddle on troublesome students. But one teacher preferred to rough them up himself.

This too led to his dismissal, and a court ruled later that he had no kick coming. The court said it was up to school authorities, not individual teachers, to decide how students could be disciplined.

On the other hand, a teacher cannot be tagged as insubordinate for invoking basic constitutional rights.

In another case, an English teacher defied the principal's order to stop assigning a certain novel—bawdy but literate—in her classroom. This defiance, a court held afterward, was not insubordination but just the lawful exercise of the teacher's freedom of speech.

FROM CONGRESS

The first session of the 95th Congress has finally concluded. The session lasted 346 days -- making it the 13th longest in history. More than 12,000 bills and resolutions were introduced in the House, and the House took a record-breaking 706 roll call votes before it officially adjourned on Dec. 15.

But, for all these statistics, it is difficult to assess at this point how historians will remember the 1977 session of Congress. For this session represents only half the story. We will not know until next year's session is over if the work begun in 1977 will be completed.

Take, for example, the major legislative issue of the first session: The President's energy package. The House approved the package in August, but the Senate spent months debating the plan. Even now, the House and Senate conferees on this vital issue have not agreed upon a final version of the energy plan. If a workable, comprehensive plan is eventually approved, the first session will be seen as having been successful. If no energy bill is agreed upon in 1978, however, the first session -- and, indeed, the entire 95th Congress -- is likely to be perceived as an exercise in wheel-spinning.

Of course, the Congress has considered, and in many cases passed, important legislation.

In a reaction to recent scandals that caused Congress' image to plummet, both the House and Senate passed new ethics codes early in the year, which included, among other provisions, limits on outside income. But some of the changes were reforms more in appearance than in substance, and public cynicism was increased when the Congressional leadership permitted a $13,000 pay increase for Congressmen and Senators to take effect without a roll call vote on this issue.

Congress did give President Carter authority to reorganize the tangled Federal bureaucracy, and endorsed the creation of a new Department of Energy in an attempt to coordinate our national effort to conserve energy, encourage fuel production and stimulate development of alternative energy sources.

The Congress approved in May legislation to expand public works jobs programs to stimulate economic activity and to provide modest individual and business tax cuts in fiscal 1977-78. The questions of more comprehensive tax cuts and reforms were, however, put off until the second session.

The major environmental development of the Congress was the enactment in August of a bill setting minimum Federal standards for regulation of strip mining activity, a measure I enthusiastically supported. Also approved were extensions of the Clean Air and Clean Water Acts.

The important developments of the first session, in my view, also include legislation that was not passed. Notable among these bills were the common situs picketing bill, which was defeated in the House in March; the Congressional election public financing bill, which was killed by a filibuster in the Senate; and the bill to create a consumer protection agency.

There were a number of legislative developments in Congress in 1977 that were of particular concern to Maine.

Early in the year, Congress approved an amendment I and other Maine representatives sponsored to make permanent the Congressional oversight procedures for proposed personnel cutbacks at bases such as Loring Air Force Base in Limestone.

The House also approved the amendment I introduced with Congressman Dave Emery to permit more Aroostook County children to take part in the traditional Maine potato harvest.

The House and Senate both approved legislation on mandatory retirement based on age for Federal workers and raising the retirement age to 70 for most other workers. This bill is in line with similar legislation already passed on the state level and represents an important step toward eliminating job discrimination based on age.

During consideration of the energy bill, the House and Senate went on record in support of tax credits for homeowners who make energy-saving home improvements and expanded low-interest loans to help low-income people make similar improvements. Both these provisions are similar to legislation I originally introduced in the House in 1973.

The Congress also approved a measure which I introduced in the House to end the imposition of a Federal excise tax on the sales tax on Maine telephone bills as well as another I proposed to permit Maine residents shopping in Canada to bring up to $25-worth of goods back into the U.S. duty free.

I look forward to the second session of the 95th Congress with great anticipation. I hope that it will be possible not just to pass a workable energy bill, but also much of the legislation I have introduced to help meet the special needs and concerns of the people of Maine.

COOPERATIVE EXTENSION SERVICE "SAVE ENERGY - SAVE DOLLARS"

If you live in an apartment, you may feel there is nothing you can do to conserve energy; it is up to your building owner or manager to make the necessary repairs and adjustments. However, although the major responsibility lies with the owner, the apartment dweller can also do many things.

The University of Maine Energy Task Force urges tenants to become energy advocates and to convey their sentiments to their building owners or superintendents.

Point out how energy is wasted in your building. If there are drafts around windows and doors, ask for weather stripping and caulking to fill the cracks. Ask for storm windows and doors and emphasize that they reduce energy requirements by as much as 30 per cent.

If areas in your building, such as the basement, utility room, or entrance hall are heated or cooled unnecessarily, point this out too. You pay for this energy, either in rent increases or in higher utility bills.

If you have a thermostat, keep it set between 65 degrees and 68 degrees F. during the day and at 60 degrees F. at night. Don't "fiddle" with the thermostat setting; it wastes energy.

If you feel chilly, put on a sweater. Keep the registers, radiators and baseboard heating units free from dust and don't block them with furniture.

Air conditioners, a desirable benefit to apartment dwellers, consume huge amounts of energy. Be prudent if you use one. To make your apartment cool when you return from work, connect the unit to a timer and set it for one-half hour before your arrival time.

A thermostat setting of 78 degrees F. or above is recommended for air conditioned areas. If you have a window unit, put it in a window which is protected from direct sunlight. Keep windows and doors closed when the air conditioner is on and close draperies and shades on sunny windows, but don't block the cooling unit.

Don't take hot water for granted. It requires large amounts of energy to heat. Take quick showers instead of baths, since they require less hot water. Cut down on dishwasher and washing machine runs by using them only with full loads, preferably in the early morning or late evening when energy demand is low.

If you wash dishes by hand, don't let the water run continuously. Fill a pan with hot water for rinsing. Use as low temperature water for washing clothes as will give satisfactory cleaning, and use cold water for rinsing.

Don't drop your efforts on behalf of energy conservation after just one letter of conversation with your building owner or superintendent. Be persistent. Energy shortages will persist until enough people do something about them.

JOSEPH P. CHAISSON POST #41

We have reached another year and why not lend a helping hand to those less fortunate than we? Why not give our time and love and do it without fuss. This is the time of year we thank our people. Number one this year is Gordon Sinclair for the fine way he handled the dues, getting a lot more than his share. Thank you Comrade Commander.

To all of our officers; they have done a fine job this year. To all the committee men who worked very hard to keep our Post high in county, department and the funds we use every day. To our Auxiliary who work hard in keeping our social standards. Last, but not least, let us not forget members who attend meetings and for those of you who care for God and country, prove it, join an organization that does Good luck, God bless.

Your Chaplain,
Clarence Langevine
